Background Information

Our society often leads children to believe that they are not really talented unless they are good in school, sports, or the arts. This is misleading, because there are many areas in which the children may excel. Each is a gift from God and is given for a special purpose.

Children may have:

- Physical talents: Athletic or work ability (strength, coordination, speed, or agility); pleasing appearance; working with one's hands.
- Intellectual talents: Remembering and understanding, writing, planning and organizing, decision-making.
- Interpersonal talents: Speaking, sensitivity, humor, leadership, making friends.
- Artistic/creative talents: Art, music, poetry.
